Dear Russell,

Due to the significant increase in house building and commercial developments across East Lothian, developments such as the new town Blindwells will have a significant impact on the transport infrastructure and how people will move about East Lothian and Edinburgh.

East Lothian Council has initiated a consultation 'East Lothian Access Study' to canvas people's travel patterns and how they will be affected by these developments.

In recent years Haddington and the surrounding area has undergone a major transformation with new housing and commercial developments without any improvement in the transport infrastructure.

This survey presents you with a unique opportunity to have your say, especially for a new railway station for Haddington.

The survey only takes 5 minutes to complete.

Even if you don't reside in East Lothian, I would encourage you complete the survey as you might want to travel to Haddington in the future.
